Analysis Of The Road Not

A Two roads diverged in a yellow wood, B And sorry I could not travel both A And be one traveler, long I stood A And looked down one as far as I could B To where it bent in the undergrowth; C Then took the other, as just as fair, D And having perhaps the better claim, C Because it was grassy and wanted wear; C Though as for that the passing there D Had worn them really about the same,

Robert Frost's The Road Not Taken: Meaning and Analysis

His first impression is that it is not practical. He first ruminates over traveling on the first road, and then talks of the second road. It is generally conceived that he took the second road. But he also mentions that the path was worn out due to constant use; and toward the end of the poem he mentions that he took the 'road less travelled'.

Rhyme - The Road Not Taken Poem Analysis

Imagery is very important in The Road Not Taken because the narrator is describing the setting for most of the poem. Much of the imagery is visual as the persona tells about the scenery. There is also a little bit of auditory (sound) imagery when he sighs. The paths that divide in the forest are portrayed as grassy, fair, and about equally worn.
