How to create footnotes and endnotes for Chicago Style. When used again, instead of writing out the complete citation for a second time in the footnote, only include: the author's last name, the title or a phrase for the title (if it's more than four words), and the page number(s) that were used. This will reduce the bulk of citation information in the paper.

Books Set In Chicago (475 books) - Goodreads

A love letter to Chicago, the Great American City, and a wry account of a young man's coming-of-age during the one summer in White Sox history when they had the best outfield in baseball, Chicago is a novel that will plunge you into a city you will never forget and may well wish to visit for the rest of your days.

'Chicago: A Novel' Book Review | National Review

Chicago is unique in my experience. It is a sui generis creation that defies the conventional rules of fiction. It is not a novel, at least not as I understand the form — it has no central conflict that is resolved (or left unresolved), no central character (the anonymous narrator largely remains aloof from the action), no overall plotline, and appears to lack a beginning, middle, and end.

Chicago is a novel about Egyptian expatriates living in Chicago, mostly either attending medical school or working in the medical professions. The writer is an Egyptian, and the novel is translated from Arabic. Obviously, you cannot expect the English dialogue to be idiomatically correct.

Chicago by Brian Doyle - Goodreads — Share book ...

It is a "crime novel" in the sense that its subject is criminality but it is not a "noir", "hard-boiled" novel. It is what you would expect if you took a brilliant dramatist and set him the task of capturing the feel of Capone-era Chicago. It is the sort of book that would dazzle art-novel readers who seldom read genre fiction.
