I give, for example the new Tau codex where, in my personal opinion, every unit except for the flyers was a valid option in its own right. The days where codex's like Space Wolves dominated with two units, grey hunters and long fangs and an army would be four units of one and three units of the other are over.

Tau Empire: Dark Eldar are very much a shooting army (at least in 6th edition), although in a very different way than Tau. As such, Tau have little we actually need; they don't have any infantry units with actual staying power, nor are their tanks so radically better than ours that we might be tempted to take one (and remember, you would only be able to take one).

Dark Eldar in 6th Edition - How do they work? Gimp-Dar. In 5th Edition, the new Dark Eldar were a breath of fresh air in an environment where armies focused on spamming the most powerful units in each codex - essentially each army always had a handful of units that were obviously superior to others, and thus were taken in great numbers at a competitive level for redundancy.
