We need to know where we live in order to imagine living elsewhere. We need to imagine living elsewhere before we can live there—Avery Gordon On a whim, I reread portions of Avery Gordon's Ghostly Matters: Haunting and the Sociological Imagination last week. I picked it up because I need convincing and cajoling. I needed [...]

Ghostly Matters: Haunting and the Sociological Imagination ...

I recently stumbled upon a unique analysis of the construction of social reality. In Avery Gordon's Ghostly Matters, haunting is a method of sociological research. She argues, "To study social life one must confront the ghostly aspects of it" (7). Ghostly Matters is her attempt to understand the complexities of social life through an analysis of the hauntings surrounding Sabina Spielrein ...
