American motor company utilized in many of its motorcycle models manufactured from 1948 to 1965, when the engine was retired for an updated model. Though Harley offered a number of different trim levels for each of its bikes that used the panhead engines, there were only three main panhead versions: a 61-cubic-inch model, an early 74-cubic-inch

Special. Harley-Davidson was hard at work on an update of the Knucklehead even during the solemn years of World War II. Engineers revised the valvetrain to incorporate hydraulic lifters that alleviated the need for constant valve adjustment, and the motor ran cooler thanks to revised heads that were now cast out of aluminum.
