disempowered, and often involuntarily displaced, while fueling social conflicts that arise from desperation as life-sustaining conditions erode. In a book of extraordinary scope, Nixon examines a cluster of writer-activists affiliated with the environmentalism of the poor in the global South.

Slow Violence and the Environmentalism of the Poor

My theory is, no doubt, in large part due to the fact that I've been reading Rob Nixon's excellent 2011 book, Slow Violence and the Environmentalism of the Poor. Nixon coins the term "slow violence" to describe long-term ecological devastation, "a violence that occurs gradually," a "violence of delayed destruction that is dispersed across time and space, an attritional violence that is typically not viewed as violence at all."
