Cooper's third collection of modern folk tales—nearly all of them narrated in a pungent, good-natured, and colloquial style. As in Homemade Love (1986), the message here is homey and simple: goodness wins out in the end, and love conquers all. The abandoned little orphan girl in "Sisters of the Rain," the blind unwed mother in "Feeling for Life" (whose social worker says she is "blind ...

Some Soul to Keep by J. California Cooper reflects life in several long short stories that are realistic enough to feel voyeuristic while simultaneously feeling symbolic of something larger. Cooper captures the essence of life in a way that pulls the reader into the hearts and minds of her characters with unrelenting tenacity and compassion.

Some Soul to Keep by J. California Cooper

The Stories. Some Soul to Keep is made up of five stories, all of which are sufficiently long and eventful to seem like miniature novels. All are told by female narrators and are intended to be read aloud so that the subtleties of the black dialect can be fully appreciated. These narrators are strongly opinionated and frequently interrupt their...
