Picked up Trask's Penguin Guide to Punctuation in Oxford UK this July, read it on the flight home and am already using it for executive English improvement classes. It's neat because it's not pretentious and strips away most of the historically rigid and stern grammar and punctuation 'rules'of the last 50 years.

In one hour, penguins can only walk about three kilometers across the ice of Antarctica. Like ducks, penguins have wide feet. Like other animals, penguins use their powerful flippers to swim fast towards food and away from danger. Like penguins, ostriches cannot fly, but they can walk and run fast. Penguins are birds, but they can't fly!
